

RCMP Eyes Nazis

Stepping Down

Progressive Conservative party leader in B.C. since 1952, Deane Finlayson is expected to step down at the annual party meeting in Vancouver next month. Finlayson, 41, has failed in five bids for political office.

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP has been aware for some time of existence of a Nazi party in Canada, an official said Monday.

He said the force has stepped publicly on previous occasions that operations of the party are being kept under observation.

He referred to a CBC television interview Sunday with Andre Bellefeuille, who called himself the leader of a 1,500-member Nazi movement stretching across five provinces.

The RCMP official would say only the party is operating in several Canadian cities. He thought the 1,500 figure given by the self-styled fehrer was exaggerated.

NOT BANNED

There is no law in Canada against a Nazi party. Canadian law only bans political parties which advocated overthrow of the government by force.

Bellefeuille is a transport department draftsman in Sorel, Que.
