Cute as a Button!

A South Island rescue team is reminding surfers of the dangers at local beaches after one person was severely injured last weekend.

“While the surf can be compelling, Sombrio Beach has large, submerged rocks and boulders that pose significant hazards, especially during heavier conditions,” Juan de Fuca Search and Rescue said on social media.

The local team was tasked with getting a surfer with a severe lower-body injury from the rocky shores Friday (Dec. 5).

“We’d like to thank everyone who offered items to help keep the subject warm while our team was en route,” SAR said.

The team followed up the tasking with something a little more fun Sunday night as part of the lighted truck convoy cruising across Greater Victoria.

“Thanks to everyone who came out for the truck parade, it was amazing to be a part of it once again this year,” the team said on social media.
