After locating an overdue hiker on Tuesday, Juan de Fuca Search and Rescue is reminding hikers that much of the Juan de Fuca Trail remains closed.

B.C. parks crews are still working to repair damage to the 47-kilometre trail caused by storms in 2024, and “significant hazards” remain on the trail, the group said.

In a social-media post, it also said wildlife in the area has become less accustomed to human activity, which can increase the risk of dangerous encounters.

Members of the Royal Canadian Marine Search and Rescue Station 37, Sooke RCMP, conservation officers and B.C. Parks staff joined in the search for the hiker, which began at about 12:30 p.m. on Tuesday.

On Monday, Juan de Fuca Search and Rescue also had to carry out a hiker with a leg injury near Mystic Beach, an area of the trail that is open for day use.

B.C. Parks said in an advisory on its website that the Juan de Fuca Trail is unsafe and impassable, with damaged bridges, unstable slopes, washouts, fallen trees and blocked sections.
